

Abstract

Ridge and buried waveguide structures feature trenches disposed proximate the waveguides in order to enhance confinement of an optical signal propagating within the waveguide are described. Additionally, an adiabatic transition region in which the distance between the trenches and the waveguide is featured.